Title of the talk: The Other Half

In the upcoming conversation, the emphasis will be placed on the integral role of art practice, considering it as only half of a broader spectrum. The discussion will delve into the other half, exploring the intricate connections between art and various disciplines such as science, social sciences, humanities, and design. This exploratory perspective seeks to unravel the intrinsic relationship between art and these diverse fields, shedding light on how the creative process intertwines with scientific inquiry, societal dynamics, humanistic perspectives, and the idea of design. By scrutinizing this holistic approach, the conversation aims to foster a deeper understanding of the multifaceted nature of art practice and its far-reaching implications across a spectrum of knowledge domains.
